The Tsunami and the responses

Mobilisation of international and national stakeholders

Massive humanitarian aid pledges

Fears of monetary losses due to corruption, waste and mismanagement ---

---voiced at national and international level

Corruption Risks

- Bribes in large procurement contracts leading to sub standards, reduction of volumes and/or inappropriately located construction works
- Rent seeking from custom officials to allow importation of humanitarian relief goods
- Diversion of relief goods by local elites and/or project staff

TI response

TI National Chapters: (Indonesia, India and Sri Lanka) led national responses

TI Secretariat: issued press releases and discussion papers

"Expert Meeting on Corruption Prevention in Tsunami relief" in Jakarta 7 – 8 April 2005, jointly with ADB/OECD

Recommendations from Expert Meeting

- Respect affected countries leadership
- Enable affected communities to articulate their needs, devise reconstruction plans and evaluate results
- Implement comprehensive and harmonised information strategies
- Maintain adequate accounts
- Develop national aid tracking systems
- Complement internal controls and external audits with community-led approaches, such as people's audit

Recommendations cont.

- Provide accessible grievance procedures
- Avoid duplication of programming
- Ensure that the public procurement frameworks adequately address disaster situations
- Rely on affected country's procurement system

TI Next steps – specifically for the Tsunami and the region

- Actively pursue bilateral and multilateral contacts for the implementaion of the frame work
- Encourage TI national chapters and civil society in affected countries to disseminate and discuss the frame work
- Consider establishing a regional roadmap

TI Next Steps – Humanitarian Relief

 Develop a set of general principles, operational guidelines and/or tools for preventing corruption in humanitarian relief
